FGF23

is a hormone that lowers serum phosphate levels by acting on the Klotho-FGFR complex, inhibiting phosphate reabsorption in the renal proximal tubules and suppressing intestinal phosphate absorption by reducing circulating levels of active vitamin D.

In chronic kidney disease (CKD), FGF23 levels are known to increase as kidney function declines to prevent phosphate accumulation. As CKD progresses, the ability of FGF23 and parathyroid hormone (PTH) to suppress phosphate reabsorption reaches its limit, thus increasing the risk of hyperphosphatemia and secondary hyperparathyroidism. Therefore, measuring FGF23 levels is important for studying CKD and secondary hyperparathyroidism. It is also considered useful for researching bone-related disorders such as hypophosphatemic rickets and osteomalacia.
